At one time or another, perhaps you've thought, "In hindsight, ..." So, what happens when 'To have been' becomes something that can be changed?

Charlotte Rhys Fenn is experiencing a mid-life crisis, one she's been immersed in for a decade or more. A once outgoing person, Charley has changed into an introverted and solitary soul, although she is married. In fact, she and her husband, Michael are downright anti-social by society's standards.

In 2025, a medical technology breakthrough, called Renovation, the modern-day fountain of youth, means a redo of the past is possible and there is nothing Charley wants more than to experience a spark of light through the grayness—a new career and an adventure that only cellular regression can promise.

Long since buried dreams would be within her grasp, yet, behind the fresh face of youth Charley will be the same. It's a difficult decision, one that could destroy all she has endeavored for, turning their life not only upside down, but flipping it backward, forward, and inside out—for better or worse.
