Thriller: Dead Pulse - Part One

Despite its position as the richest country in Africa, the murder and maiming of people for their body parts continues to this day in South Africa. Human body parts are still occasionally used as ingredients in the production of traditional medicines or “Muti” and some people will pay big money if they have a problem that they believe can be alleviated by the use of another person’s limbs or organs.

After the fourth in a series of murders takes place in the remote Eastern Cape region a pair of investigators from the Hawks special investigation team is flown in to see if they can put an end to this cruel drama. The Hawks, an amalgamation of police detectives and prosecutors, have powers that go beyond that of a regional police investigation but they are not without their enemies within the political world where corruption is so often regarded as the norm.
