60 Proven Methods for Making a Good First Impression Each and Every Time.

Step by Step Guide

There are many situations in which it can be vital to make a good first impression. Although we can never entirely govern what other people think of us, there are some easy and straightforward steps that will allow you to be in control of the impression you are making on other people and the opinion of you that they come away with.

With a little practice, these 60 steps will become second nature and will seem comfortable and instinctive — you will not appear to be ‘trying too hard’ or seem forced or weird. Your interactions with other people will be more relaxed and enjoyable and your professional relationships will flow more smoothly. Although it is possible to recover from a bad first impression (given time and the opportunity) how much simpler and easier would it be if you could start off all your interactions on precisely the right foot?

In this book we run through 60 common ‘first impression’ situations. Together we will think about possible pitfalls and tell you exactly how to present yourself so that the other person or people will come away from your interaction feeling positive about you and keen to see you again.

The situations we will cover together are

- A job interview
- A first date
- At a party
- Meeting new people
